DAYTON, Ohio. November 17, 1971 --- Three Dayton artists are exhibiting their talents in the University of Dayton's Kennedy Union this month. The exhibits will be shown from now through November 30, 1971 in the Art Gallery and the main display case in the lobby.

Mr. Louis Weber's enamel works are in the main case with wife Joan Weber's pottery. The seven highly colored enamel pictures set off the fifteen pieces of pottery with their unusual shapes and soft colors. Also in the Main Case are some of Mrs. Weber's metal and stoneworkings, done as figures of people in sterling silver.

In the Art Gallery, Mr. William Habjan, Biology teacher at Chaminade High School, presents some of his photographs. He presents many themes, ranging from the gaiety of childhood to the sadness of weather-beaten buildings and people. Mr. Robert Lamb, photography critic in Washington, D.C., says of Mr. Habjan's work: "His style is as straight-forward and direct as a photographer's can be. He shuns trick techniques and artificial arrangements, concentrating, rather, on natural settings."

The main case is open to the viewing public during the Union hours, but the art gallery is only open from 11:00 A.M. to 2:00 P.M. and from 6:00 to 9:00 P.M.
